Be part of a new Building Era

The aim is to build more homes, more quickly and to a higher standard, with a focus on sustainability, efficiency, decarbonisation and circularity. Housing shortages, high financial costs, new energy efficiency standards and labour shortages make it necessary to change the construction model towards industrialisation, which is positioned as the most effective solution to overcome these challenges and maximise the productive capacity of housing and buildings.

The concept of advanced industrialisation is based on the principle of collaboration between actors and requires a profound digitalisation of the entire construction process.

Industrialised construction is also an opportunity to incorporate new profiles, such as young people and women.

This combination of talent will allow new challenges to be tackled with guarantees.

Public-private collaboration with initiatives such as the PERTE for industrialisation promoted by the Government, seek to provide a solution to the lack of housing. It is about building more, faster and better, with greater sustainability and efficiency criteria that lead us to an improvement in decarbonisation and circularity in building, so that Spain will have a public housing stock similar to the European average as soon as possible.

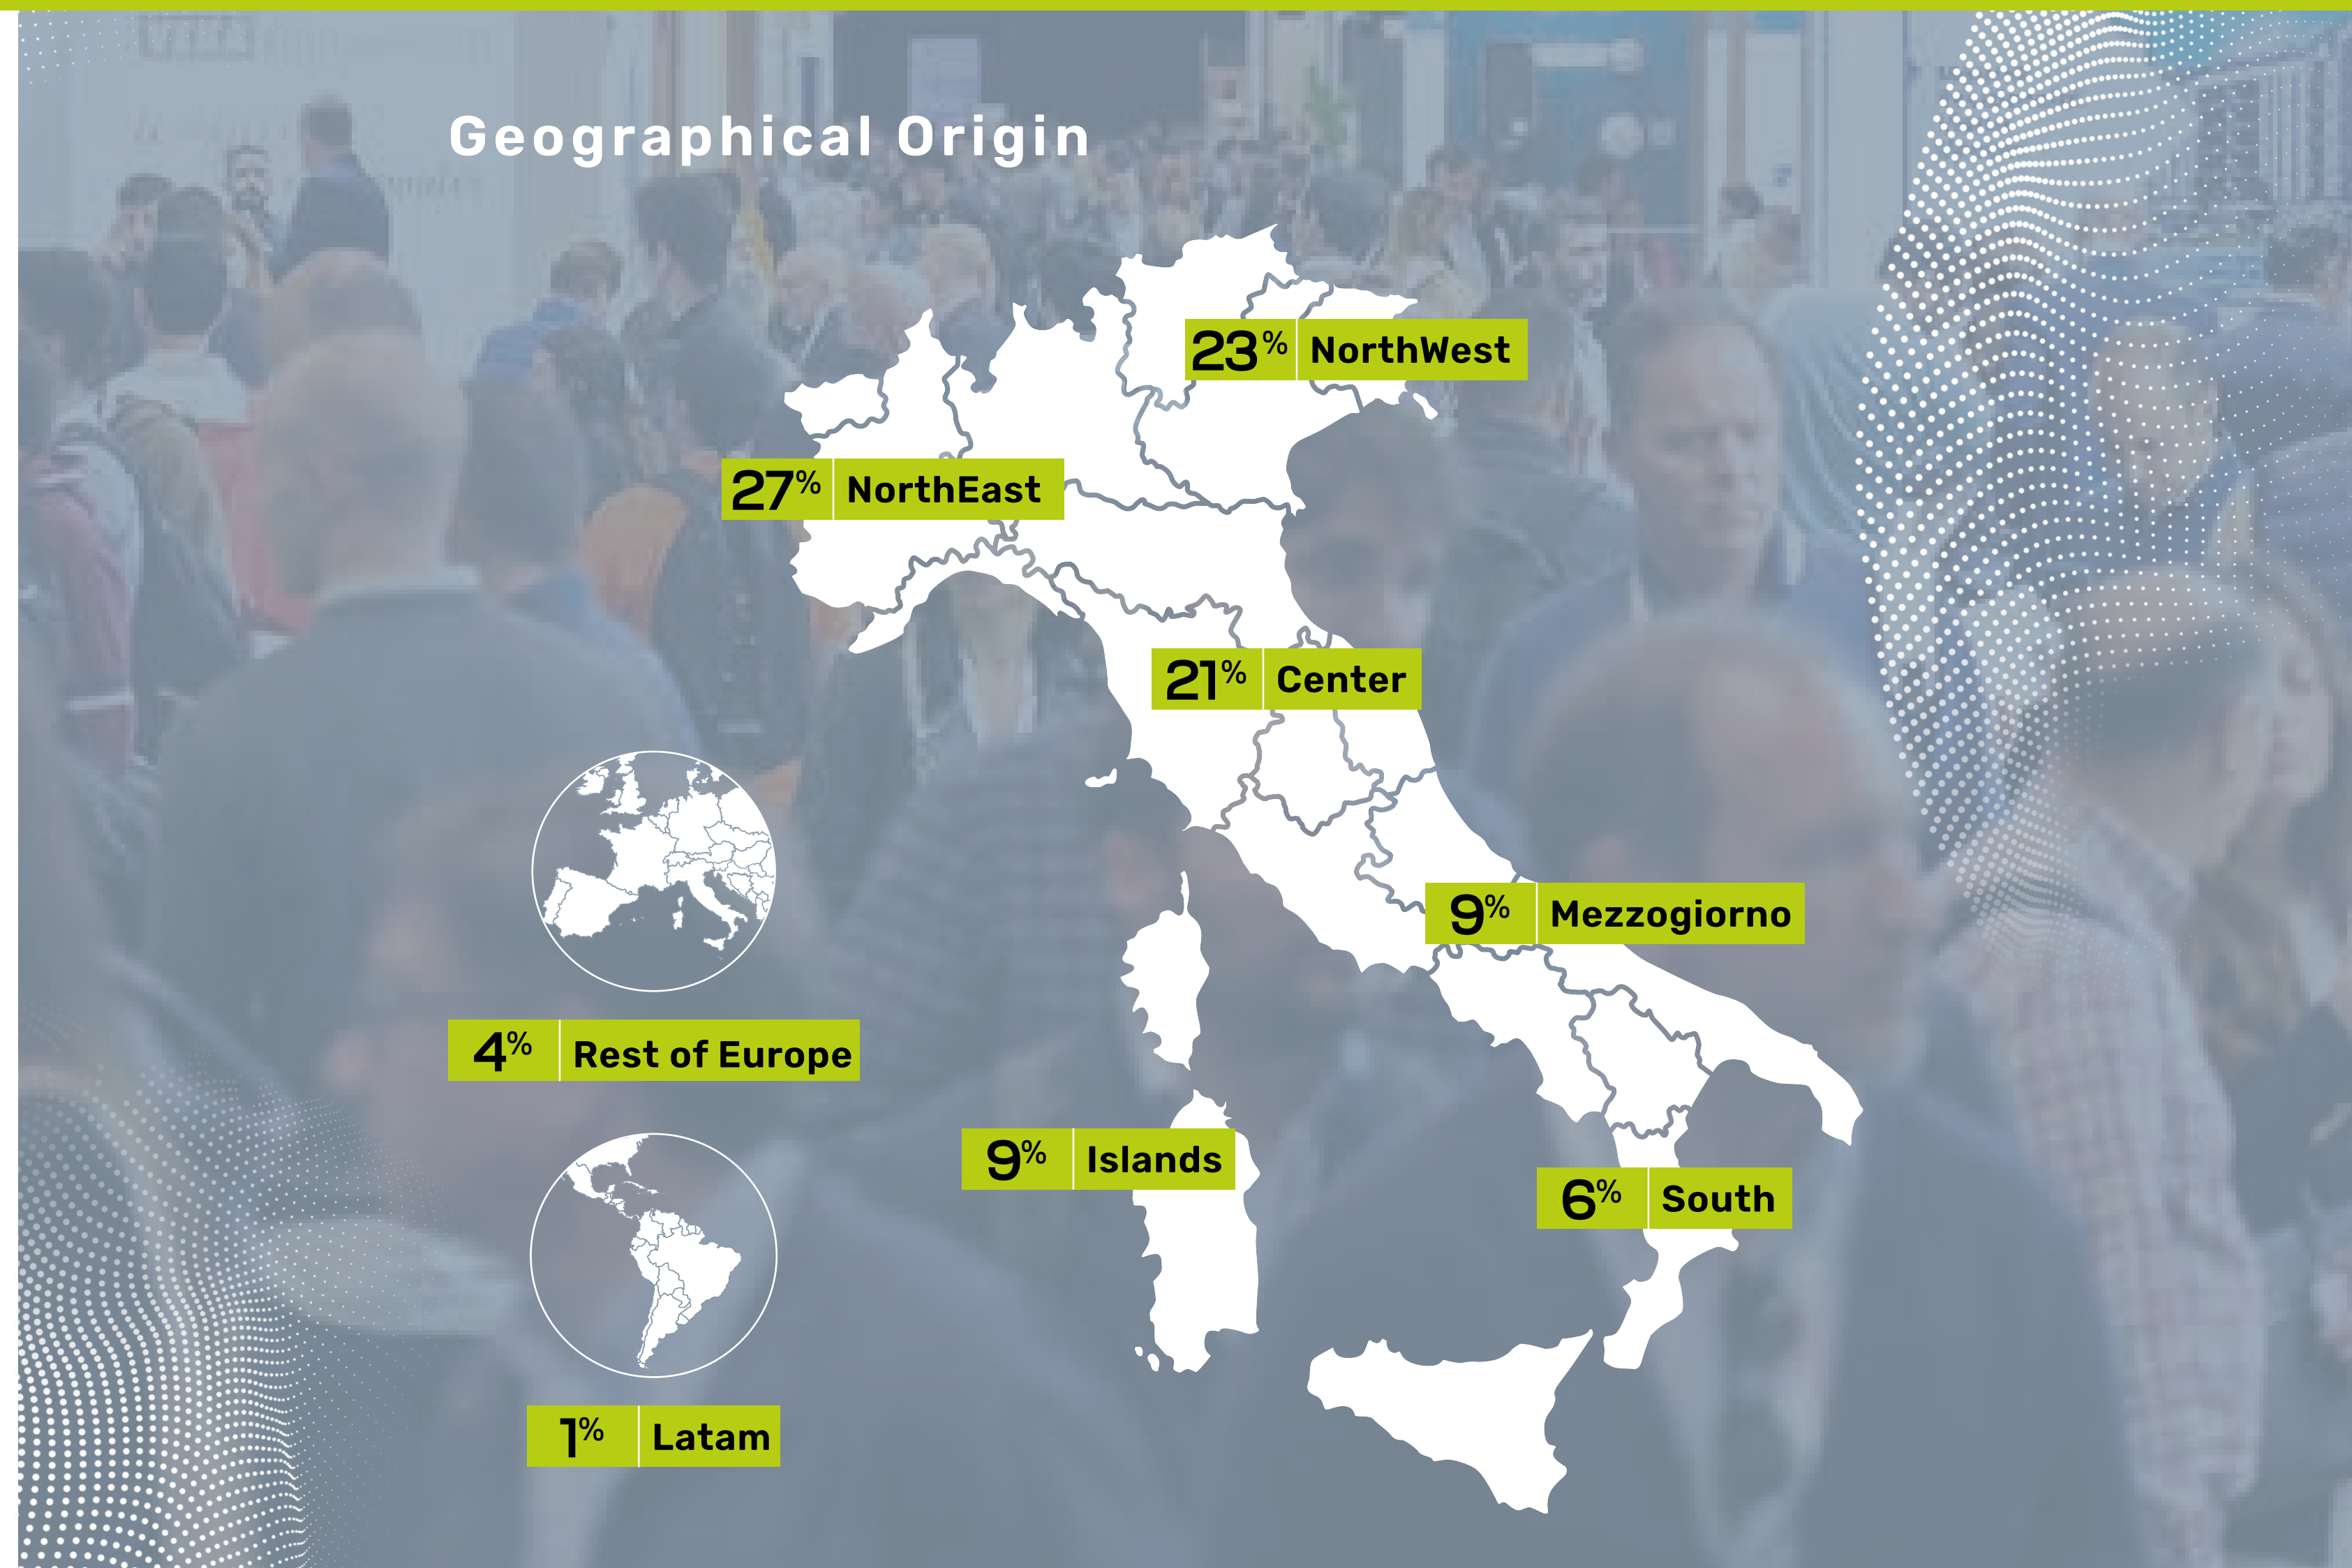

REBUILD is the main meeting forum to promote the future of building that allows us to reduce construction times, increase productivity and competitiveness of the sector and offer architectural solutions of higher quality, design and energy efficiency.

All this in order to have a more industrialised, sustainable and digitalised sector.
